"The best way to predict the future is to invent it."

Summary

Highly skilled freelance software developer with a strong passion for continuous professional growth. Proficient in web-based and mobile technologies, I bring extensive knowledge of development and deployment processes to contribute effectively to a dynamic team.

In my current role as a Software Architect at CostDetect, I have demonstrated my expertise by leading the development of a successful grocery price comparison app from the ground up. Utilizing React Native with a PHP backend, I executed complex tasks including data extraction from external sources, machine learning, data visualization, and server architecture.

Dedicated to open source projects and active collaboration within tech communities, I thrive in command line environments and possess proficiency in Linux, tiling window managers, vim, and other minimalist tools. By customizing my desktop experience, I continually discover more efficient workflows, which can serve as inspiration for my work in UX design for web and mobile development.

Committed to personal growth and staying at the forefront of technology, I actively contribute to open source projects such as VisiData, Gitea, Sway, Vue, React Native, PHP, and soju. I constantly seek new challenges to enhance my problem-solving skills and embrace the latest advancements in the field.

I am highly motivated to join a team where I can further expand my skills, contribute to innovative projects, and drive impactful solutions.
